

WVDEP STREAM RESTORATION FUND

The Stream Restoration Fund program is used for the restoration, enhancement, and preservation of aquatic resources that have experienced loss of function due to impacts caused by coal mining activities or acid mine drainage.

The projects support regional conservation initiatives and enhance stream health by improving water quality and fostering biodiversity through habitat restoration.

Buffalo Creek, Clay County before Restoration

Buffalo Creek, Clay County post Restoration

For more information contact the West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection, Division of Mining and Reclamation.